The Solano Local Food System Alliance will host a quarterly educational forum online Thursday entitled “Ag Land, Development, Zoning & Orderly Growth: How Does It Work?,” that will cover several topics of interest to the local food system.

Experts from the field will join together via Zoom to discuss how zoning and planning decisions are made and what steps have to take place when development is proposed for farmland. According to organizers, the forum will focus on planning and zoning in Solano County, the county’s orderly growth initiative in its general plan, regional planning, the impact of various forms of development and what legal questions arise.

Presenters will include Solano County Orderly Growth Committee, Greenbelt Alliance, an experienced county planner and an attorney specializing in Organizers said this forum is part of the Alliance's dedication to holding public educational sessions around topics of interest to the local food system.

The meeting, which will take place from 4-6 p.m. Thursday, is free to attend but those that wish to participate must register online at <https://tinyurl.com/yztyt6ba>.
